ESCAPISMKingfisher Villa, Grenada

Paradise, or at least the concept of 'paradise', is a subjective thing. One man's heaven, after all, is another man's absolute hell. Typically, though, we can assume that for most people, the idea of paradise usually consists of one or more of the following elements: Sun-kissed secluded beaches; crystal clear seas; peace and tranquillity and, of course, a perfectly-positioned hammock. In short, it's Grenada. Or, to be even more precise, it's Kingfisher Villa.

Set amid 1.5 acres of tropical gardens at the end of Turtle Back Drive and overlooking Mount Hartman Bay, Kingfisher is, without doubt, the finest, most sumptuous private villa on the Spice Island. It is the kind of place where you unwind as soon as you kick your shoes off and crack open a Carib.

Elegant and understated on one hand but undeniably spectacular on the other, it has everything you could possibly need for that dream holiday; stunning 200-foot beach frontage, four vast en-suite air-conditioned bedrooms, swimming pool and plunge pool, Lombok teak furnishing throughout, a Balinese gazebo and a boat house overlooking your own beach. And, lest we forget, the most perfectly placed hammock in the Caribbean...
