Described by the Guardian as one of the best Valentine's love nests in the country The Workshop is self-catering for two at its most chic. It is a spacious contemporary conversion of a Victorian stable building brings the best in 21st century design to a delightful period building in a stunning countryside setting. Designed by the owner in collaboration

Dominique Imbert. Facing it is a generous corner sofa/chaise longue with views out to the meadow.

Other features include a large flat screen TV, DVD player and Sky Freesat, a side table designed by 20th century designer Eero Saarinen and Tolomeo Mega floor lamp.

The dining area is furnished with a table and chairs created in the 1950s by the Danish furniture designer Arne Jacobson, including four iconic 'series 7' chairs. The well-equipped kitchen has a built-in Smeg cooker and a white stone surface with sleek grey units underneath. A curving white wall leads to the bedroom where you'll find a king size

Designed by the owner in collaboration with Pitman Tozer architects, the Workshop is an impressive former farm outbuilding standing at the edge of a one acre wildflower meadow.

Sliding/folding patio doors lead from the oak deck into a large open plan living space where the focal point is a suspended spherical steel fireplace designed and made in France by bed with crisp white 100% cotton sheets and duvet cover.

Outside a generous oak decking provides a delightful suntrap and the four patio doors slide back to extend the open plan living space to the outside. The meadow gives a picturesque backdrop and changes throughout the year.
